Episode 7

THE CAPTIVE BALCONY

Soolah faints. The door is forced open by the onslaught of the tiger. Meanwhile, in the room underneath, Stanley and Michael see a trap door overhead. By standing on one's shoulders, the other opens the trap door, and rescues Soolah just as the tigers rush into the room.

The jealous wife, in revenge for her husband Vastinoiding her after he discovers she has turned the tigers loose upon Soolah, whom he fancied, releases the two men, thinking the girl dead.

The three find Oreginales and escape into the street. Michael is hungry - steals a cake from a baker. He and the natives give chase. They reach the roof of a building. The Sheik has sent his men in pursuit also. The fugitives cross to another building on a ladder, Stanley carrying Soolah.

They descend into a garden. The soldiers rush in. They enter a door, to find themselves back in the Sheik's house. Garbo is there, having arrived with his cavaliers.

He takes Soolah away, paying the Sheik to hand the two men from the roof of the building by their heels.

Soolah burns her ropes at a camp fire and escapes. Two officers descend in a captive balloon. They tie it to a tree near a body of water and start for the village.

A tiger pursues Soolah. She takes refuge in the car of the captive balloon. The tiger leaps up after her.
